

2026 Admission Brochure of Postgraduate Program for International Students of Jining Medical University

I. Introduction to Jining Medical University

Jining Medical University, founded in 1952, is a provincial-level undergraduate medical institution with a focus on medical education and coordinated development across multiple disciplines including medicine, science, engineering, management, and humanities. It is among the first universities in China to participate in the Excellence in Medical Education and Training Program and was designated as one of the first applied undergraduate universities in Shandong Province. The university currently operates three campuses: Jining Taibaihu Campus, Rengcheng Campus, and Rizhao Campus.

The university currently comprises 19 teaching units and offers 34 undergraduate programs, including 2 national first-class undergraduate programs, 2 national distinctive undergraduate programs, and 18 provincial first-class undergraduate programs. It has three master's degree programs in Clinical Medicine, Public Health, and Pharmacy. The university admits over 18,000 full-time undergraduate students, master's students, and international students. Its faculty and medical staff total 6,780 members (including affiliated hospitals), among whom 1,226 are full-time teachers. The university boasts 12 national-level talents, including recipients of the National Key Overseas Talent Program, National Outstanding Youth Scientists, National Excellent Young Scholars, experts enjoying special government allowances from the State Council, National Teaching Masters, and National Outstanding Teachers. The Clinical Medicine discipline ranks in the top 5‰ globally according to ESI rankings, while Pharmacology and Toxicology, as well as Molecular Biology and Genetics, rank in the top 1% globally according to ESI rankings. The university operates one directly affiliated hospital, one directly affiliated traditional Chinese medicine hospital, and 13 non-affiliated hospitals.

The university began admitting international students to China in 2005. In 2018, it was designated as a recipient institution for foreign student scholarships by the Shandong Provincial Government. In 2023, it successfully passed the Shandong Higher Education Quality Assessment for International Students in one attempt. Students come from 28 countries including Pakistan, South Africa, Egypt, and Zambia. To date, the university has trained over 300 international students, with five recipients of provincial-level or higher awards.
